McCook and Vander Haden of Milwaukee was the lowest bidder for paving section 24, Lake and McHenry counties and sections 25 and 18, in McHenry county of Route 22, when the bids were opened November 12, by the state department of Public Works and Buildings. Their bid was $342,000.

The McCarthy Improvement company of Davenport, Iowa, was the lowest bidder for paving Section 20, route 22, in Lake county. Their bid was $252,541.

The road paving program in Lake county next season promises to be one of the heaviest in history.

Bids have been received in Springfield for many miles of paving that already has been outlined but which could not be completed this year because the state had exhausted its appropriation. In addition bids will be received shortly on other sections of Lake county roads which it is planned to pave next year.

Lake county already has the reputation of being one of the best paved counties in the state. Its reputation will be increased when the new program has been put into effect.

By having the contracts awarded this winter instead of waiting until spring the contractors will be able to have their material on hand early in the spring and there will be no delay in getting the paving started.

MOTOR COP OF THE VILLAGE OF AREA MAKES A RECORD

This is probably a mere joke on the traffic cop at Area. It is said that while Area has only about one mile and one-half of paved street, the motor cop who is hired by the town board at times make as high as 15 arrests for speeding in a day. Motorists claim that the paving at this particular point is deceiving because of the fact that it appears to be in the country instead of an incorporated village. For that reason they frequently step on the gas and about the time they get on the gas going good they are stopped by the motor cop and placed under arrest.

GURNEE CHURCH DEDICATED FRIDAY NIGHT; BANQUET

The dedication program for the new church at Gurnee started Friday night with a banquet. In addition there were elaborate programs both Sunday morning and evening.

About 16 years ago an agitation was started to have the Gurnee church moved into the village. This finally was accomplished in 1923. In addition to moving the church into the village a fine basement and numerous Sunday School rooms were added. The auditorium has been enlarged considerably and beautified. The entire church now ranks well with other suburban churches.

LET CONTRACT FOR 20 MILES PAVING; MEETS TROUBLE

Among the 25 miles of paving in Lake county let last Wednesday at Springfield, twenty was for the improvement of what is known as route No. 22, between Telegraph road and Barrington, through Half Day.

Trouble is being experienced, however in obtaining all the right of way for this improvement, according to Charles E. Russell, county superintendent of highways, and condemnation proceedings are to be started immediately against a number of property owners, the superintendent said.

The county also has just completed construction of a 24-ft span bridge over Squaw creek in Fremont township. This is known as the Delaine bridge.

The paving of three streets in Barrington was also started last week.

OPEN FOX LAKE PAVED

The newly constructed pavement on the Lake Villa-Fox Lake road was opened last week. It was announced by Charles E. Russell, county superintendent of highways, that this road is the one that the residents of Fox Lake have been clamoring for at various meetings of the board of supervisors.

20 Years Ago in Antioch

Thursday, November 17, 1904
J. R. Cribb was a Chicago passenger Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Percy Chinn and baby of Kenosha are visiting with Percy's mother and family.

Little Olive Renohan spent Friday and Saturday in Chicago, where she went to consult an oculist.

Henry Herman transacted business in Chicago Monday.

H. A. Radtke transacted business in Chicago Tuesday.

Frank Harden was a business visitor in Chicago on Tuesday.

The Antioch football team went to Genoa Junction on Saturday and played against the Genoa team. The score being 39 to 0 in favor of Genoa Junction.

The Farmers line telephone company have put in a new and larger switch board and have changed its location from the Simons house to Osmonds furniture store.

On Monday evening the Epworth League canvassed a small section of the county and succeeded in obtaining a goodly supply of vegetables which was sent to the Methodist Deaconess Orphanage at Lake Bluff. Some money was donated to pay the freight but the League decided to pay it and what money was donated was sent direct to the orphan's home.

A. V. SMITH GETS SEVENTH VICTORY OF TERM

The depopulation of Lake county at the hands of Attorney A. V. Smith, and his assistant, S. H. Block, continued Friday, and Matt Mathieson, who pleaded guilty of attacking a 6-year old girl, was trundled off to Joliet. This term the state has won three homicide cases, in which Geo. "Jungle Red" Richardson, Clarence Hurlbut and David Hermosillo were defendants. He has won four convictions last week in which Silas Jayne, Matt Mathieson, Dennis Sholby and Fred Priebe were the defendants.

DAYS WE'LL NEVER FORGET

"Ag" Boys Sing for Radio from K. Y. W. Station

The Agriculture Club double quartet took part in a Father and Son banquet that was broadcasted last Friday night from the Y. Y. W. station, Commonwealth bldg., Chicago.

The double quartet, consisting of Leslie Palmer, Clifford Hook, Adelbert Miller, William Maush, Emil Hallwas, Joseph Bernolte, Donald Westerfield and Harold Britton, sang "Kentucky Babe" and "I Saw Esau." Both number were well given and some of the people who listened, in claimed it was "hard to distinguish the local quartet from a professional one that sang one of the same songs a few weeks ago from the same station. Many telegrams came in during the course of the banquet from educational men in all parts of the state expressing their appreciation of the program. Several letters of appreciation have been received by C. L. Kull of the agricultural department.

The success of the local boys is due to the careful training given them by their music teachers, Miss Bauch and Mr. Stark. Those people who failed to hear the boys will again have a chance to hear the "Ag Boys" at a program on January 13th, 1925, at the Antioch High School.

In addition to the boys and their music instructors, Principal L. O. Bright, C. L. Kull and Philip Simpson accompanied them to Chicago.

M. MATHIESEN MUST SERVE ONE YEAR TO LIFE

After his trial had been in progress two days, Matt Mathieson, 56 years old former constable at Fox Lake suddenly decided to enter a plea of "guilty" to the charge of having taken liberties with Marie Jeanette, six year old daughter of Fred Nimfior of Fox Lake.

Mathieson was sentenced to serve from one to 20 years in the penitentiary and was taken to Joliet last week, commitment papers being made out at once.

Mathieson admitted he committed the act, but claimed that he had become intoxicated with liquor that had been served him by the father of the girl.

Just before Mathieson decided to change his plea to guilty a summons was issued for Dr. Bellows as a witness, but the doctor was in the midst of performing an operation at the hospital.

Mathieson is married.

A CORRECTION

Last week's issue of the News stated that Mrs. Emma Bartlett was the winner of first prize at Bunco at the Royal Neighbor's party last week. This was an error. Mrs. Lillian Bartlett was the winner.

Light Question Is Again Heard for Main Street

The last few weeks there has been a strong undercurrent of feeling that with all the big improvements now going on in Antioch that they will be for naught unless some means are provided to show them off.

This again brings up the question of a proper lighting system. The cable for a string of 25 lights is practically all installed at a cost of about $700, and estimates furnished by the General Electric company show that the remaining cost for installing the lights will only amount to about $100 front foot.

It has been proven that the system of lights discussed when the matter was taken up before, have increased business in other towns 25 per cent. They are very attractive and have improved the looks of other towns considerably.

There is really no excuse for Antioch not having a proper lighting system. Towns all around us, many considerably smaller, have installed lighting systems. Here is a question that the Business Club should take up.

CHAIN O'LAKES COMPANY ARE DOING SURVEYING

The Chain O'Lakes project seems to be definitely under way. There has been rumors for the past three weeks that work has been resumed, but no authentic information could be obtained.

From good authority it is learned that the company has started active work on the property, comprising about 5000 acres, and under the direction of J. D. Funk a crew of more than ten surveyors are on the ground daily.

It is also learned that the company is now actually acquiring the property and that initial payments have been made on some of the farms embodied in this project.

BROOK STATE BANK PURCHASES PROPERTY

The Brook State Bank has purchased the property known as the Green Front store. The sale was negotiated some time ago, but the sale was not announced until certain details had been completed.

The officials plan a first-class up-to-date bank, and a committee is now visiting other banks for the purpose of designing a institution that will give the most possible convenience to its patrons and prove a credit to the town in appearance. Present plans call for work to start in the early spring and completion some time during the summer.

Good Time Is Had at Monthly Dinner Monday

The business men held their regular monthly dinner Monday evening at Butch Rothers. The dinner was late in getting under way, but the diners soon made up for it.

The singers were on the job as usual and not many of the songs in our books were missed.

As Lew Hendee of Waukegan did not put in an appearance with the speakers of the evening, two guests of Lee Middendorf, George Mirsch, district superintendent of the Standard Oil Co., and Warren Silvers, were called on to relieve the situation. They rendered two very nice solos.

An improvise quartet composed of Messrs. Mirsch, Silvers, Clarence Shultz and Rev. Stanton then favored us with some very nice selections.

The feature of the evening was the suggestion that each member present report what he did Armistice day, Nov. 11, 1918. The reports were really very funny, especially the situations and doing of some of our prominent citizens, and ranged all the way from the front line in France to Manitoba. It was a blessing that this was not "ladies night."

A little business was discussed regarding the road situation and Messrs. Vos and King were again called on committee to "sit in" with the Governor.

Channel Lake News

RUTH McCORKLE, Editor

Mr. and Mrs. R. Shannon, who spent the earlier part of the week in Chicago, returned home Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Whitton and son, and Mrs. Perry spent the week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Dunford.

Mr. F. L. Kriebel spent Sunday at the Chas. McCorkle home.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Roberts motored into Chicago Monday. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. J. D. King. Mr. and Mrs. King will remain in the city, where Mrs. King is receiving medical attention.

Mr. E. Cox is building an addition to his store at Channel Lake. It is understood that he will turn the new addition into a restaurant, and thus be able to better cater to his summer trade.

Mr. C. M. Doering was a caller at the Charles McCorkle home Friday evening.

Mr. Bill Brinkman of Chicago was a Channel Lake visitor over the week end.

Channel Lake School

In spite of the inclement weather prevailing throughout the day, the Armistice program and box social was well attended. Following a sing, and a short program by the school personnel, short addresses were read by Dr. Kelly, and Mr. S. A. Hawthorne of Waukegan.

Mr. Cox acted as auctioneer at the basket sale. Thirty-six dollars and twenty-five cents were realized from the sale and this amount will be used in providing new playground equipments for the school.

The school feels indebted to, and wishes to thank its patrons, and those who lent their efforts toward making our event a success.

Mr. L. O. Bright called on us Thursday, leaving a set of four tests in grammar and composition.

We acknowledge calls from Rev. E. Lester Stanton, Miss Margaret Runyard and Philip Hockwell during the past week.

HEART TROUBLE IS THE CAUSE OF DEATH

Mrs. Elizabeth Sheldon, wife of Charles Sheldon, farmer, two and a half miles north of Grayslake, was found lying dead on a couch in her home Thursday last by a member of her family. A doctor was called in and pronounced death. He notified the office of coroner John L. Taylor.

Deputy Coroner M. D. Penny went to the home and conducted an inquiry. Mr. Sheldon testified that his wife got up at the usual hour that morning and started a fire and did other work about the house.

The verdict of the coroner's jury was that death was caused by organic heart disease. Mrs. Sheldon was well known in the vicinity of Grayslake and was regarded highly. She made her home in that region for many years.

Local Producers to Hire a Tester For a Month

Men Receive Tests on Their Statements That Call for Action

Seventy-five indignant farmers met last Friday night at the village hall. Complaints were heard on shortages of tests for the month of October. The shortages ranged from 1 to 3 1/2 points.

The local after some discussion appointed a committee comprising Frank Hahn, Henry Grimm and Peter Toft, to check up on the test sheet at the local plant and the test appearing on the statements of the patrons.

Further action was taken to provide a tester for the local association. This was left in the hands of the officers of Antioch local, who will hire an authorized tester for one month, for which funds will be provided from the treasury of the local, and if it is found beneficial to the producers, action will be taken to provide for a permanent tester through an assessment. The committee to check up on the test is to report next Friday evening.

MILK PRODUCERS MAINTAIN $7.00-A-YEAR DUES

The board of directors of the Milk Producers met last Thursday and matters of importance to the association discussed. The question of dues was again brought up, and after a stubborn fight by a minority for a percentage assessment, the dues of $7 a year were maintained. This is an injustice to the small producer and should be rectified.

Car Goes Into Ditch; Woman Seriously Hurt

Mrs. Mary Grail, 55, 2501 Sangamon street, Chicago, was probably fatally hurt and her son had a narrow escape from serious injury, when the machine went into a ditch and overturned, at 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon just south of Libertyville on Route No. 21. They were pinned under the car.

Louis Burke of Libertyville, who was driving a road patrol truck, saw the car approaching him from the rear and he turned out to enable the driver to pass. When the car failed to pass he turned to see what had become of it, and discovered that the machine was in the ditch.

ANTIOCH TEAM DEFEATED BY BURLINGTON 45-0

Antioch received the worse defeat of the season Saturday at Burlington. The line boys played a very listless game and Burlington was able to plow through the line at will. Shuneson of Antioch received a bad blow on the head and was unable to continue the game.

Many of the Antioch visitors claim poor umpiring on the part of the referee. He failed to issue penalties in a great many cases.

This was the last game of the season for Antioch.

"AN OLD FASHIONED MOTHER" ENJOYED AT HIGH SCHOOL

Tuesday evening the presentation of "An Old Fashioned Mother" by the Grace Lutheran league of Woodstock was well received by a large audience. Some splendid acting was enjoyed, especially the part of "Jerry," played by John Beebe.

Of Interest to the Farmer

Is the farmer, finally on his way to the prosperity he knew a few years back?

Has the great agrarian depression which has ruined many hundreds of American farmers and sent thousands of them away from the farm to the more remunerative industrial centers played itself out? What of the American farmer today and what of his future?

With the purchasing power of his dollar moved up to ninety cents as compared to 1923, brought about by the fact that the prices of his products are considerably higher than a year ago while at the same time the prices of many products he buys have decreased in price, the farmer today is far better off than a year ago. Prof. Ivan Wright, University of Illinois economist, pointed out today as he discussed the August figure, just published, of the United States Department of Agriculture concerning the purchasing power of "farm products."

"There is a reason for optimism when one reads the recent report," said Prof. Wright, "and the sky has seemed so black all during the trying times the farmer has passed through look considerably brighter; at least for the present. The U. S. Department of Agriculture reports that in August the general index of purchasing power of farm products has moved up to 90, the year 1923 being considered as 100." Mr. Wright said. "For the same period of 1923, the purchasing power of farm products was 73. Therefore, with the farmers' purchasing power having increased, the dollar to him today is much larger than at the corresponding time a year ago."

"The American farmer's advantage this year is due to good crops in this country while grain crops of Canada and many European countries were very much below normal. The present favorable prices which the American farmer is receiving for his crops may not be continued through 1925; this would probably be true if the production of foreign countries returns to the normal, or near normal, point."

"Through careful reorganization," Professor Wright believes, "the prosperity which has come to farmers in the past five months will enable many of them to lighten their burden of indebtedness.

"Unless this present period of prosperity endures long enough to prove that it is more than temporary, the farmer should avoid any increase of his financial obligation."

"How long can the farmer maintain this favored economic position? What can be done to avoid the recurrence of another depression in agriculture? These are the questions that the farmers and their leaders should be endeavoring to answer upon the basis of sound economics and direct the ship of agriculture accordingly."

"Two Arms Full" of Turkey

How would you like to be this Turkey and a little in so fair a maiden's arms? We wouldn't mind it a bit smile on her countenance. We can only we'd hate to face this bird's future. You see, he's one of the advance guard of big gobblers destined to decorate the festive board of city folks on Thanksgiving day. No wonder he has such a plain expression. Something seems to tell him he's due to "get it in the neck."

But the girl. Look at that pearly almost read her thoughts. Bet she's thinking just how delicious this big Turk is going to be—roasted to a crisp brownness and stuffed with luscious chestnuts. It's enough to make anybody's "mouth water." Wish we had him.

SHEEP EXHIBIT SHOWS STRIKING CONTRASTS

An exhibit on sheep raising and management under preparation by specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture for display at the International Livestock Exposition in Chicago is expected by those in charge to attract wide interest among sheep raisers.

The exhibit contrasts choice and common lambs and shows methods by which each is produced. Live animals and likenesses of corresponding carcasses illustrate the advantages of proper sheep management. The exhibit shows also that the common lamb yields only 43 per cent of dressed carcasses while the choice lamb had a dressing percentage of 52 per cent. The common lamb, the exhibit explains, was sired by a scrub ram and was probably infested with stomach worms. Inferior breeding and infestation with parasites are important causes of inferior stock and low returns.

"SEEING GOD"

If you want to see a very human picture, turn to the fourteenth chapter of the Gospel according to John. Jesus is reiterating his constant belief that God is manifesting Himself through him. He is saying that if the disciples will really look at him, they shall see God and know more about God. "If ye have seen me, ye have seen the Father." Then Philip, with all his impetuous naïveté, says, "Show us the Father and it sufficeth us."

Many of us might imagine at first that we too would be satisfied if we could see God, but it is not so. What is it about your friends and loved ones that you love? Is it their photograph, or their contour, or their size, or their features? No, you love the things they are, which you understand through the things they do. They have to live with you so that by their acts and deeds you know them before you love them. If you were on the other side of the world from your mother, and one of you should tell me that you would be satisfied just to get close enough to your mother so you could see her, that you would be satisfied, I would not believe you. You would not be satisfied unless you could take her hand, and kiss her and talk with her and live with her, that her spirit might manifest itself to your spirit in the acts of living together. So I know that if God had been manifested to Philip in one great blaze of glory, he would not have been satisfied. I have not time to argue now with anyone about the difference between the Deity or Divinity of Jesus, but the testimony of these two centuries has been unceasingly that those who do look upon the Christ do find God. And no one can think about Christ without thinking about God. Those disciples needed desperately to look upon Jesus and see God, so they might pattern their lives after his, and others looking upon them might see God too.

When Queen Wilhelmina of Holland was a little child, she sat one night beside a great general. Looking up at him, she said, "I wonder you are not afraid to all by me."

"Why should I be afraid?" he asked.

"Because all my dolls have the measles."

There may not be danger of contagion from dolls, but there is a positive contagion of character. You will influence everyone you meet. The great question is how. And if your character is impure the contagion will be more dangerous than that of any plague known to the medical science. When people look at you, do they think of God? When your children look at you are they influenced to be more like God?

There is always glory on the face of a little child. God put it there. If that child sees God in you, that godlikeness may remain there. If it does not see God in you, lines of cynicism, or selfishness or sin will come to blot out the glory. Maybe your child will see God in one of the neighbors, and in spite of what you do will not wander from God. Billy Sunday used to say that he always pitied Bob Ingersoll, for his father, who was a Presbyterian minister, was married to four wives, and three of them were living when he married the fourth. No wonder that religion did not impress Bob as being very real.

You have heard demonstrations, perhaps, of phonographs so perfect that you could not tell whether you heard the machine or the voice of the artist. Christ needs apostles who will reproduce him to the world.

Are you doing that kind of work for Him, or are you leaving your share of Godly living for some one also to do? I covet for you and for this community, which so desperately needs to see God, that you may see Him, and see Him, until you shall be like Him, so that others may see Him in you.

Sermon, preached Sunday, Nov. 16.

Game & Fish News

C. F. Mansfield Jr.
Secretary of the Federated Sportsmen of Illinois

Sportsmen and conservationists were urged to work for the passage of the Game Refuge—Public Shooting Grounds bill by representative Robert Scholes of Peoria in an interview recently.

As the title of the bill indicates, it provides for purchase by the Federal authorities, of game sanctuaries, and rest grounds for migratory birds, and at the same time provides for shooting grounds where any man carrying a Federal license may hunt, subject, of course, to such regulations as may be necessary.

According to Mr. Scholes this legislation if passed will mark a great stride towards maintaining the American ideals of sport for all. In contrast to the European system where only the wealthy have an interest in the game or are permitted to shoot. Such a condition is rapidly developing in the U. S. and, if immediate action is not taken to secure large areas of land for conservation of our game as well as providing a reasonable amount of sport for all of us, all hunting will soon be in the hands of a very few wealthy clubs.

This bill comes up for a vote at the next session of Congress in December. All expense of purchase of land, control and maintenance will be borne by the hunters without one cent added to the general taxes. Write your Senator and Representative in Congress at once, enclosing a marked copy of this newspaper and tell them that you want them to support this bill.

At the next session of the Illinois Legislature sportsmen will submit a similar plan for Illinois, but the passage of this Federal law must come first. Get behind this finest piece of conservation legislation ever introduced in State or Nation; and see that it becomes a law.

Hints for the Household

GENERAL HINTS

November is a wonderful month to entertain. Informal parties are numerous, especially before camp fires or open fire places.

Decorations: Get out your warm hangings, silver, and cozy additions. Have many bright berries placed here and there in your home.

Your table also should shine with bright berries, red sauces, and desserts. Cranberries are seasonable and colorful. Bitterweeds can be gathered in November.

To Clean Parchment Lamp Shades

Take any good polishing cream; rub gently with a soft cloth; do only a small surface at a time.

LABOR SAVER

Cover your pantry shelves with oil cloth. The first process, of course is more expensive than paper and takes just a long. But ever after, the pantry cleaning process is lightened as the pantry shelves only need to be washed with a rag wrung out with warm soapy water.

Something Cute for Kiddies Parties

Serve animal crackers standing on vanilla wafers.

Method: Take animal cracker, dip feet in frosting or egg white and in nutmeg, vanilla and salt. When well waters. This makes a cunning menagerie for the children.

COOKING HINTS

To Keep Left Over Olives

Put olives in a bottle with some of their liquid. Then pour olive oil over this. The oil will remain on top and in this way keep the air out.

Potato and Turnip

Small turnip.
Potato—As much again as turnip.
Method: Peel and cook potatoes and turnip separately; cook as for mashed potatoes; when done pour off water.

Mash together and season with pepper, salt and plenty of butter and milk exactly as for plain mashed potatoes. Serve in place of plain potatoes. You will find this has a delicate flavor and is a pleasant change.

BAKING HINTS

Squash Pie

1 pint of strained squash (2 cups.)
1 small cup of light brown sugar.
1 tablespoon of cornstarch.
1 teaspoon cinnamon.
1 teaspoon ginger.
1 salt spoon nutmeg.
1 teaspoon vanilla.
1/4 teaspoon salt.
3 eggs.
1 pint milk (2 cups).

Method: Beat together—squash, sugar, cornstarch, cinnamon, ginger, nutmeg, vanilla and salt. When well blended add 3 eggs beaten and then the milk. Mix well and pour into pie plate lined with pastry. Bake.

HONEY'S COOKIES

1 cup lard.
1 cup of sour milk.
1 teaspoon of soda.
2 cups of sugar.
1/2 teaspoon of nutmeg.
2 eggs.

Large cup of nut meats chopped fine.
A little salt.
1 teaspoon of baking powder.
2 1/2 cups of flour.
Method: Mix well the lard, sugar and nutmeg; then eggs, well beaten. One cup of sour milk in which 1 teaspoon soda has been well stirred. Then flour, salt and baking powder. Last, add the nutmeats which have been well dredged with flour. Drop small teaspoonful on baking sheet and bake in hot oven.

Providence Has Been Kind to Us All—

Let Us Safeguard Our Prosperity!

Another year rolls around and with it comes the day set aside for Thanksgiving—a day in which we review the past and give thanks for the bounties that have been bestowed upon us.

This bank is indeed grateful for the prosperity that it has been favored with—for the confidence the citizens of this community have shown in bestowing such prosperity and for the many acts of kindness and consideration that it has been our privilege to receive from those with whom we came in business contact.

We consider it, indeed, a favor to be able to serve such an intelligent and loyal community as this and hope that every citizen will call upon us whenever we may be able to serve his purpose.

Thoughts for Thanksgiving

Choice Thanksgiving Poultry

Every woman hopes to make her Thanksgiving dinner the "feast of feasts!" That means, first of all, selecting the choicest poultry.

So, madam, we suggest you make it TURKEY

One of our select, fresh, corn-fed Turkeys. And, stuffed with chestnuts or some other desired filling and roasted to a crisp brownness—just wait and see how you and the family and your guests will simply delight in its tastiness.

Perhaps you would prefer a pair of tender Chickens, a Duck or Goose. Whatever your choice, we're ready to fill your poultry order now.

On this, the great occasion, set aside for us all to give Thanks for the bounties that have been bestowed upon us by our Creator during the past year, the business men of Antioch desire to take this occasion to express their sincere thanks for the many courtesies and considerations extended by our neighbors and fellow-citizens. In the list of things that they are thankful for, your Goodwill and Friendship comes first and foremost. And, to show their appreciation of this they will endeavor to serve you as faithfully in the future as they have in the past and exert every effort to make life for you happy, healthful and successful.

Judith of BLUE LAKE RANCH

By JACKSON GREGORY

COPYRIGHT BY CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

CHAPTER X

Judith Triumphant

Though, under the surface, life upon Blue Lake ranch was sufficiently tense, the remaining days of June, frivole by as bright and honey as the little meadow-blues flitting with the field-flowers.

Since from the very first the ranch had been short-handed, the hours from dawn to dusk were filled with activity. Carson, who, true to Judith's expectations, had brought back some new ideas from his few days at the experimental farm—ideas not to be admitted by Carson, however—brought a hundred young steers from a neighboring overstocked range. In the lower corral the new milking-machines were working smoothly, only a few of the older cows refusing to have anything to do with them.

Tripp had succeeded in locating and getting back some of the men who had worked long under Luke Sanford and whom Trevers had discharged. It was a joy to see the familiar faces of Sunny Harper, Johnny Dodge, Bing Kelley, Tod Bruce. The alfalfa acreage was extended, a little more than doubled. Plans were made for an abundance of dry fodder to be fed with the lush silage during the coming lean months. Bud Lee broke his string of horses and, with Tommy Burkitt and one other dependable man, began perfecting their education, with an eye turned toward a profitable sale in January.

Quinnlon, perforce, was left undisturbed upon the sheep-ranch, whither Emmet Sawyer had followed him. Against Bud Lee's word that he had had a hand in the trouble at the old cabin were the combined oaths of two of the sheepmen that he had been with them at the time.

Hampton's guests, who had planned for a month-at-the-ranch, stayed on. But they would be leaving at the end of June. That is, Faris and Rogers positively; the Langworthys, perhaps. The major was content here, and to stay always and always, would be an unbounded joy—of course, with little runs to the city for the opera season and for shopping trips, and a great, jolly house-party now and then.

The only fly in March's ointment was Hampton himself. She confessed as much to Judith. She liked him, oh, ever so much! But was that love? She yearned for a man who would thrill her through and through, and Hampton didn't always do that. Just after his heroic capture of the terrible Shorty, March was thrilled to her heart's content. But there were other days when Hampton was just Pollock Hampton. If it could only be arranged so that she could stay on and on, with no day of reckoning to come, no matrimonial ventures on the horizon...

"That's simple, my dear," Judith smiled at her. "When you get through being Pollock Hampton's guest, you can be mine for a while."

Hampton was now a great puzzle to Mrs. Langworthy, and even an object of her secret displeasure. Not that that displeasure ever went to the limit of changing Mrs. Langworthy's plans. But she longed for the right to talk to him as a mother should. For, seeking to emulate those who so instinctively admired, Bud Lee and Carson and the rest of the hard-handed, quick-eyed men in the service of the ranch, Hampton was no longer the careless, frankly inefficient youth who had escorted his guests here. He went for days at a time unshaven, having other matters to think of; he came to the table bringing with him the aroma of the stables. He also wore a pair of trousers as cylindrical in the leg as a stovepipe; over them he wore a pair of cheap blue overalls, with the proper six-inch turn-up at the bottom to show the stovepipe trousers underneath. The overalls got soiled, then dirty, then disgracefully blotched with wagon grease and picturesque stains, and Hampton made no apologies for them.

Twice he left the ranch, once to be gone overnight, intending that it should be a mystery where he went. But, since he rode the north trail which led to the Western Lumber camp, no one doubted that he had gone to see Bayne Trevers, in whom he still stoutly believed.

Between the 15th and the memorable 30th of June, Bud Lee saw little of Judith Sanford. She was here, there, everywhere; busy, preoccupied. March he talked with twice; once when they rode together while Hampton, racing recklessly down a rocky slope for a shot at a deer got a fall, a sore shoulder and made his debut in certain new swear-words; once when all of the guests, with the exception of Faris, who was painting the portrait of the stallion, Nightshade, and the major, who had "letters to write," came out to watch the horse-breaking. This time, introduced to Mrs. Langworthy, Lee got for his bow a remark:

"ably cold stare. Others might forget, here in the open, the distinction between people of the better class and their servants—poor Mrs. Langworthy, if you please."

Having created his imaginary woman, Lee was ripe to fall in love with her when she came. He had thrilled to the touch of Judith's hand that night in the cabin, his thoughts, so many and so busy, centered about the superbly alive beauty that was Judith. The fact disturbed him vaguely. The thought that he was very deeply interested in her in the good old way between man and maid, never entered his stubborn head. She was as far removed from his ideal woman as the furthestmost star in the infinite firmament. Perhaps it was this very disquiet within him, caused by Judith, which now turned his thoughts to March.

"That's the sort of woman," he told himself stoutly. "A man's woman; his other self, not just a partner; the necessary other side of him, not just the same side in a different way."

March had little, feminine ways of helplessness which turned flatteringly to the strength of the other sex. Judith asked no man to aid her in mounting her horse; March acquiescently slipped a daintily slipped foot into a man's palm, rising, because of his strength.

Now, when his thoughts went to Judith, Bud Lee turned them, dexterously to March, making his comparison, shaping them to fit into his pot theory. When, days passing, he did not see Judith, he told himself that he was going to miss March, when she left. When one day he came unexpectedly upon Judith and with lips and eyes she flashed her ready smile at him, he felt that odd stir in his blood. What a pity that a girl like her, who might have been anything, elected to do a man's work! When, again unexpectedly, he came another day upon March riding with Hampton, there was no quick stirring of the pulses, and he contented himself with the thought: "Now, that is the sort of woman. A man's woman! His other self..." and so on.

When Judith planned a little party to mark the departure of March on the 30th of June—it wasn't definitely decided that the Langworthys were leaving then, but at least Faris and Rogers were—the reasons actuating her were rather more complex than Judith herself fully realized or would have admitted. She liked March; she wanted to do at least this much for her. Living room, dining room, music room, library—they would all be cleared of the larger pieces of furniture, the double-doors thrown open. The string band from Rocky Bend would come. Judith would send out invitations to the nicer people there and to the ranches hereabout. She would have a barbecue, there would be races and the usual hotting games, then the dance. March would know nothing of it until the last day, when her eager enthusiasm would send her a flutter to her dressing room.

Unanalyzed, it was simplicity itself, this giving a farewell party to March. Under analysis, it was a different matter. The boys at the ranch would be invited, and of course most of them would come. But Lee would come. Judith would see to that, even if he should hesitate.

Bud Lee had always been so self-possessed, had so coolly found her lacking, that, planned a little, Judith longed for the opportunity to place him in an atmosphere where a little of his calm self-possession might be snatched from him. If she could embarrass him, if she could see the red rise under his tanned skin, she would be giving Mr. Lee a lesson good for his soul.

"I've got powerful little use for an affair like that," said Lee coolly, when she told him. "Thank you, Miss Sanford, but I don't think I'll come."

Judith shrugged her shoulders as though it did not in the least matter to her.

"I'm giving it for March," she said. "Do you think it would be quite nice to her to stay away? I am afraid that she will be hurt."

Not Judith's words, but the look in her eyes changed Lee's intentions. "If it's for Miss Langworthy," he said quietly, "I'll come."

The day came and Bud Lee began to regret that he had given his promise to go to March's dance. All day he was taciturn, aloof, avoiding not only the visitors from Rocky Bend and the other ranches, but his own fellows as well. He took no part in the races; was missing when the blazing trenches and smell of broiling meat told that the barbecue was in progress. He worked with his horses as he had worked yesterday, as he would work tomorrow. With the dusk he went, not to the men's quarters, but to the old cabin at the Upper End. Again and again that day he had thought of that look in Judith's eyes

When she had asked him to come for March's sake. What the devil did she mean by it? He didn't know exactly, but he did know that in his own vague way it irritated him. Her eyes had laughed at him, they had teased, they had told him that Judith herself wasn't wasting a single thought upon Mr. Bud Lee, but that she had noticed his obvious interest in Miss Langworthy.

"D—n it," muttered Lee. "I won't go."

But he had said he would go, and in little things as in big ones he was scrupulous. He would go, just to dance with March and show Miss Judith a thing or two. He felt unreasonably like taking Miss Judith across his knee and spanking her. And he did have a curiosity to see just what Judith would look like in a real party-dress.

"Poor little wild Indian," he grumbled. "She's got the makings of a wonder in her, and she doesn't even know it. What's worse, doesn't care."

He sat with a dead cigarette between his fingers, staring at the wind-blown flame of his coal-oil lamp. Judith was doing this as she did everything that she set her two hands on, thoroughly and with her whole heart and soul. In that lay the key to her character. There was no half-way with her. When she gave, it was openheartedly, with no reservation; where she loved or hated, it was unreservedly; if she gave a dance it would be a dance for the countryside to remember.

Yesterday Hampton had wondered, grinning, what he'd look like in a dress-suit again. Hadn't had a thing on here of late but his war togs.

Lamp in Hand, Went Down Into the Cellar.

Whereby he called attention to his turned-up overalls, soft shirt, battered hat, and flapping vest with the tobacco-staining out.

Bud Lee turned down the wick of his lamp, which had been smoking, and sat staring at it another five minutes. "By thunder," he said softly to himself, "I'll do it."

He shoved the bunk away from its place in the corner, opened a trapdoor in the floor and, lamp in hand, went down into the cabin's cellar. Here was a long pine box, hooped with tin bands for shipping, its lid securely nailed on. He set down his lamp and with shirt-sleeve wiped off some of the accumulation of dust and spider-web. A card with the words, "David Burkitt Lee, Rocky Bend," tucked to it made its appearance. Lee shook his head and attacked the lid.

"It's like digging out a dead man," he muttered. "Well, we'll bury him again tomorrow."

It was a box of odds and ends. Clothing, a few books, a pack of photographs, an ornate bridle, a pair of gold-chained spurs, a couple of hats, gloves, no end of the varied articles which might have gone hastily into such a receptacle as this from the hurried packing in a bachelor's apartments. Bud Lee, with a dress-suit and the articles it demands, even to a tie and dancing-shoes, went back into the room above.

"Like Hampton," he mused, looking at the things in his hands. "I wonder what I'll feel like to get back into these! I'm a fool." He laughed shortly and set to work to improvise a flatiron to take the worst wrinkles out of the cloth. "Once a fool, always a fool. You can't get away from it."

It was settled. He was going to March's party. He insisted upon calling it in his mind, "March's party." And he was wondering, as he shaved, how Judith was going to look.

As Bud Lee came through the flames into the courtyard, he heard the tinkle of a distant piano and the tremolo of a violin, so faint as hardly to be distinguished above the splash and gurgle of the fountains. The court, bathed in soft light, seemed a corner of fairyland, the music vanishing elfin strains to some mischievous troop putting sighs and love dreams into a sleeping maid's breast. The night was sleep with stars, warm with summer, serene with the peace of the mountains. He was late. They were already dancing within.

He stood a moment, looking in at the outer edge of the flood of light which rushed through the wide doors; behind him Japanese lanterns hanging from a vine-covered trellis; before him flowers, bright chandeliers, girls' dresses like fluttering, many-colored, diaphanous butterfly wings. He had been saying to himself: "I must hurry if I want to dance with March." And something stirring, restlessly within him shoved aside the thought of March and put in its stead the old wonder: "What sort of a Judith would he see tonight?"

He found it difficult to form any picture of her here, among these gay, inconsequent merry-makers. Judith to him spelled a girl upon a horse, booted and spurred, with a scarf about her neck fluttering wildly behind her as she rode, the superb, splendid figure of a girl of the out-of-doors, alive with the hot pioneer blood which had been her rich inheritance, a sort of wonderful boy-girl. Remove her flapping hat, her boots and spurs and riding-suit, and what was left of Judith?

Outside were half a dozen of the boys who had not mustered courage to set foot on the polished floors, Carson and Tommy Burkitt among them. Tommy stared at Bud Lee and his jaw dropped in amazement. Carson took swift stock of such clothes as he had never suspected a good horse foreman owned, and gasped faintly: "The d—n... lady-killer!"

But Lee had neither eyes nor thoughts for them, nor remembrance of his own change from working garb to that of polite society. The dance came to a lingering end, the couples throughout the big room strolled up and down, clapping their hands softly or vehemently as their natures or degree of enthusiasm dictated, and Lee forgot March and sought eagerly for a glimpse of Judith.

Refused a second encore, the couples stood about chatting, the hum of lively voices, hesitatingly eager enjoyment. There was no early chill upon the assembly, to be dissipated as the dance wore on; the day of festivity outdoors had thawed the this crust of icy strangeness which is so natural a part of such a function as this. Already it seemed that everybody was on the most cheerful terms with everybody else.

Suddenly his eyes, still seeking Judith, found March. Surrounded by a little knot of men, each of them plainly seeking to become her happy partner for the next dance, adorably helpless as usual, Miss Langworthy was allowing the men to fight it out among themselves. Lee moved a little nearer to see her better. In a pale blue gown, fluffy as a summer cloud, her cheeks delicately flushed, a white rose like a snowdrop in the gold of her hair, she was flutteringly happy, reminding him of these little meadow blues that had flown palpably about him that day in the fields. And she was obviously as much at her ease here, in an atmosphere of music and flattery, as the tiny butterflies in their own meadows.

Bud Lee came in, his tall form conspicuous, and went straight to March. She saw him immediately; forgot herself to stare almost as Carson had done; smiled at him brightly; waved her fan to him.

He took her hand and told her with his eyes how pretty she was. The delicate tint in March's cheeks deepened and warmed, her eyes grew even brighter.

"Flatterer!" she chided him. "Are we to talk of the moth and the star again, Mr. Lee?"

The knot of men about her melted away. Lee stood looking down into her upturned eyes, measuring her gentle beauty. He had thought of her as a little blue butterfly—she was more like a wee white moth, fluttering, fluttering.

The music, again from a hidden distance, set feet to tapping. March plainly hesitated, flashed a quick look from Lee to the others about them, then whispered hurriedly: "It's terrible of me, but—"

And she slipped her hand into his arm, cast another searching glance over her shoulder for a partner who had been too tardy in finding her, and yielded to the temptation to have this first dance with "the most terribly fascinating man there!" Lee slipped his arm about her, felt her sway with him, and lightly they caught the beat of the dance and lost themselves in it. And still, again and again turning away from March, he sought Judith.

The dance over, their talk was interrupted by an excited and rather overindulgent youth with a hurt look in his young worshipping eyes, who still reminded Miss Langworthy that she had cut his dance. She was so contrite and helpless about it that the youth's heart was touched; she blamed herself for her terribly stupid way of always getting things tangled up, gave him the promise of the next dance, which she had already given to some one else, disposed of him with charming skill, and sighed as she turned again to Lee.

"I haven't paid my respects to our hostess," he said quietly. "Where is Miss Sanford?"

"She sent her excuses," March told him. "Aren't we in a draft, Mr. Lee?" He moved with her away from the soft current of air, a distinct disappointment moving him to the verge of sudden anger. What business had Judith to stay away?

"You mean she isn't coming at all?" he asked quickly.

"Oh, no," she told him, busy with the rose in her hair, her eyes bright on his. "Just as the dance was beginning she had to go to the telephone. Some ranch business, I don't know what. But she sent word she would be here immediately—I believe," and March made her remark teasingly, though she did want to know, "that a certain mysterious gentleman who masquerades as a horse-breaker is very much interested in Judith."

"What makes you say a thing like that?" he asked, startled a little. March laughed.

"A woman's intuition, Sir Mystery!" she informed him gayly.

Save Your Stock from Mineral Starvation

There has long been a need among livestock and poultry raisers for a real, high-class, scientifically-compounded Mineral Feed made by a reliable, experienced company.

It has long been known that the general ration did not contain the necessary minerals for healthy, high-producing animals. Just what minerals were needed and how much is of recent discovery.

Prominent stockmen and poultrymen are now using minerals. Agriculture Experiment Stations Recommend it. Don't experiment with mineral compounds of questionable origin and value. The Blatchford Company, the world's oldest, producers of high grade commercial feed offers a real mineral feed at an honest price—three distinct, separate feeds—one for cattle, one for hogs, one for poultry.
